Yuen Speaker Series — New Neighbors? Migration, Multilingualism and the Modern City (Mar 24)

Human migrations and relocations have been taking place for centuries, but the last 75 years have seen major population shifts from rural areas to urban centers. Urbanization comes from both in-migration and transnational migrations due to an array of social and economic factors. In this talk, Yuen Visiting Scholar Professor Lenore Grenoble will discuss the causes of urban multilingualism, and how questions of linguistic diversity play into issues of identity and nationalism in the home, across social networks, in local neighborhoods, and the larger context of the city as a whole.

Yuen Speaker Series — Math Learning Starts Early: How Families Can Help (Mar 31)

How would early interactions in the home environment affect children's academic achievement? How can parents play their roles in facilitating children's Math learning? What's the relation of math anxiety to math achievement in both children and adults? Join us at the coming public lecture by Yuen Visiting Scholar Professor Susan Levine, Chair of Department of Psychology, to find all these out.

On Board Conference on NGO Board Service (Mar 28)

Join us for On Board in Hong Kong, a full-day conference on NGO boards that brings together nonprofit leaders and business professionals looking to give back. On Board offers insights into board governance for current board members, as well as staff at NGOs, and facilitates connections between potential board members and organizations looking to grow their boards. At the conference, you'll hear from business and NGO leaders, as well as Chicago Booth faculty. Speakers include John Wood, founder, Room to Read, and John Burrows, who teaches general management, leadership, and negotiations for Chicago Booth Executive Education. Sessions at On Board will focus on topics including maximizing board talent and fundraising for NGO boards. On Board is free to attend, but registration is required.
