In the upcoming session 'Broken Democracy: Election Challenges and Consequences During COVID-19', former University of Chicago, now Harvard Professor Nicholas Stephanopoulos will provide an overview of the 2020 Presidential election and how it will be carried out during the greatest health crisis in a generation.

Join Professor Stephanopoulos and his guests on Wednesday, September 23 at 8:30pm Hong Kong Time to learn how the U.S. plans to hold the election and make democracy work in 2020. The panel will answer questions on how gerrymandering, long wait times at polling locations, mail-in ballots and social distancing from COVID-19 could suppress the vote to impact the outcome of the election.
