Digital technology has made possible major innovations in the use of digital images for teaching and research. The talk by Professor Katherine Tsiang, Associate Director of Center for the Art of East Asia (CAEA) of UChicago, introduces the imaging technologies that CAEA has used and invented for interactive viewing of paintings and sculptures from Chinese Buddhist cave sites that make them more fully and widely accessible than in the past. Join us at the coming public lecture on Jan 21 (Monday) to learn more about these.
