CHICAGO

 DIRECTOR'S PICK

Professor James Evans of UChicago will introduce the power of "large models" (LMs) underlying modern artificial intelligence (AI) as arbitrary function approximators that predictively simulate text, sound, video, proteins, action sequences and more. He will explore challenges associated with producing as well as consuming diversity to achieve sustained innovation and avoid system collapse. Professor Evans will then conclude with a discussion of existential concerns around AI safety for humanity, and efforts to ensure it that range from disciplining AI to slavishly honor human values to building a diverse ecology of AIs that check and balance themselves.

Join us in person or via Zoom on March 18 to learn more about Professor Evans' insights!
