July 24, 2025 | 6:30pm HKT

Amir Hampel
(UChicago PhD'17 Comparative Human Development)
Clinical Assistant Professor of Global China Studies

Autism and ADHD awareness has grown rapidly in Greater China. Parents and clinicians are turning to Chinese medicine for treatment, raising key questions about parenting perceptions, state policies, and evidence-based practices.

Professor Amir Hampel (UChicago PhD'17 Comparative Human Development) will examine these issues by presenting research with public health professionals, with clinicians developing Chinese medicine therapies, and on social media discourses about the use of Chinese medicine for autism and ADHD.
